

Humanities Institute at Stony Brook

p r e s e n t s

Thursday, November 21st, 2013

4:30 p.m.

Humanities 1006

Reception to follow

Elizabeth Kolbert

Welcome to the Anthropocene

Increasingly we live in a world made – or remade – by humans. For this reason, geologists are seriously considering whether we have embarked a new epoch: the Anthropocene. As we change the world, the questions we ask also change. For a start: what does it mean to be human in an age when mankind is determining the fate of the planet?

Elizabeth Kolbert is a staff writer at The New Yorker, where her stories have included political profiles, book reviews, comment pieces, and articles on climate change. Her three-part series on global warming, “The Climate of Man,” won the 2006 National Magazine Award for Public Interest, the 2005 American Association for the Advancement of Science Journalism Award, and the 2006 National Academies Communication Award. She is the author of two books, The Prophet of Love: And Other Tales of Power and Deceit, and Field Notes from a Catastrophe.

